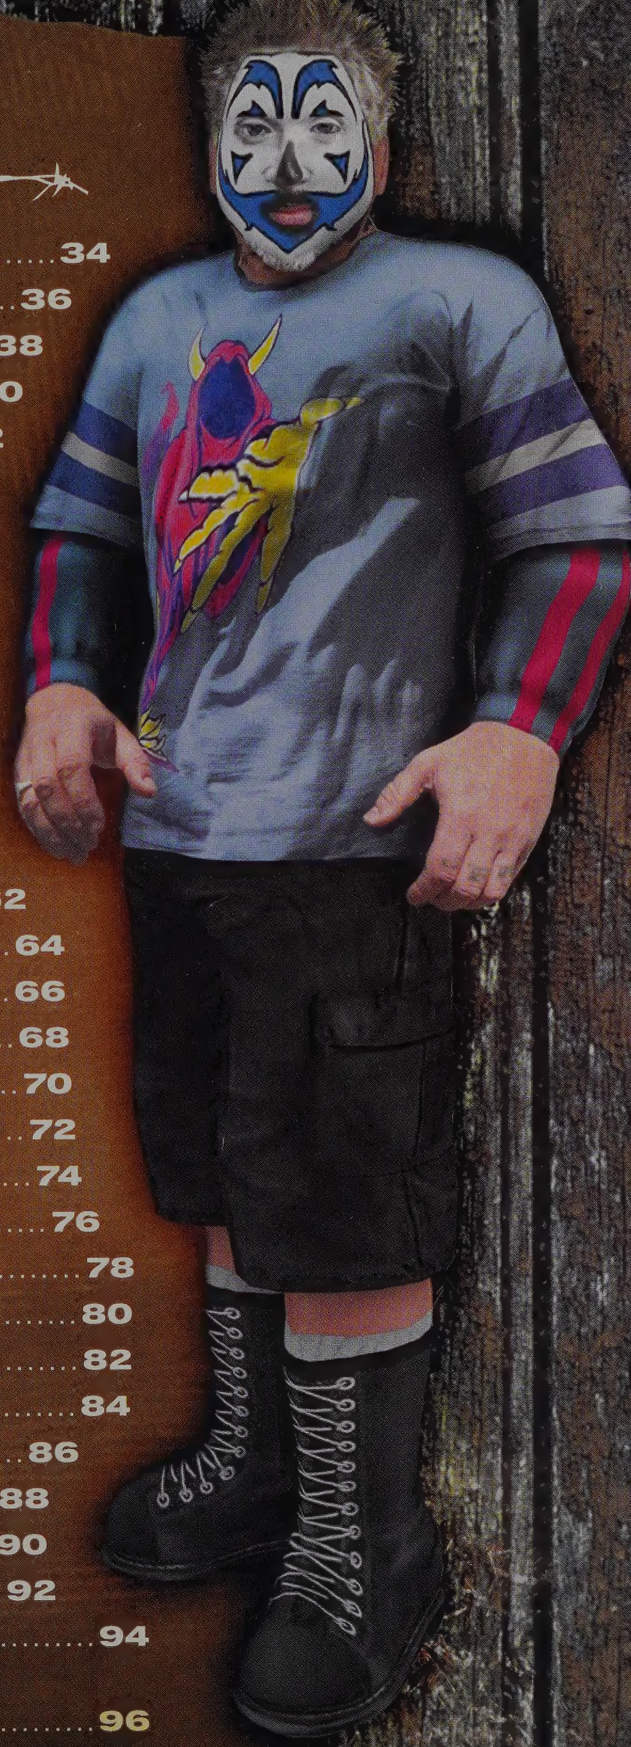
Insane Clown Posse Interview 96



Don't Try This at Home!

The wacky world of wrestling is part circus, part slugfest, and all show, and backyard wrestling is no different. In fact, professional wrestling actually seems a bit tame in comparison to the madness you're about to witness in Backyard Wrestling. Then again, what did you expect from a game that features clowns, chicks, and cows in a wild mix of backroom battles, fire, and daredevil leaps from three-stories high?

Featuring the likes of everyone from rappers The Insane Clown Posse to Kitana the Miller Lite girl to some of the most infamous backyard brawlers you've seen in those underground tapes stashed under your best friend's bed, if you're looking for a fight, these guys (and gals!) are ready to give it to you.

Sure, Stone Cold never rubs his booty up against his opponent's frontside like Kitana does before her lap dance version of the Stunner, but that's probably not something you'd want to see anyway. Like we said, Backyard Wrestling takes an already over-the-top "sport" to that next level of tastelessness. Backyard wrestling fans wouldn't have it any other way.

Inside, you'll find everything you ever wanted to know about each character, as well as how to utilize the various weapons and environments to your advantage. From scalding opponents in a hot shower to getting kicked in the chops by a stripper, you'll become the nastiest of the nasty, and a Backyard Wrestling legend.

Stun Meters

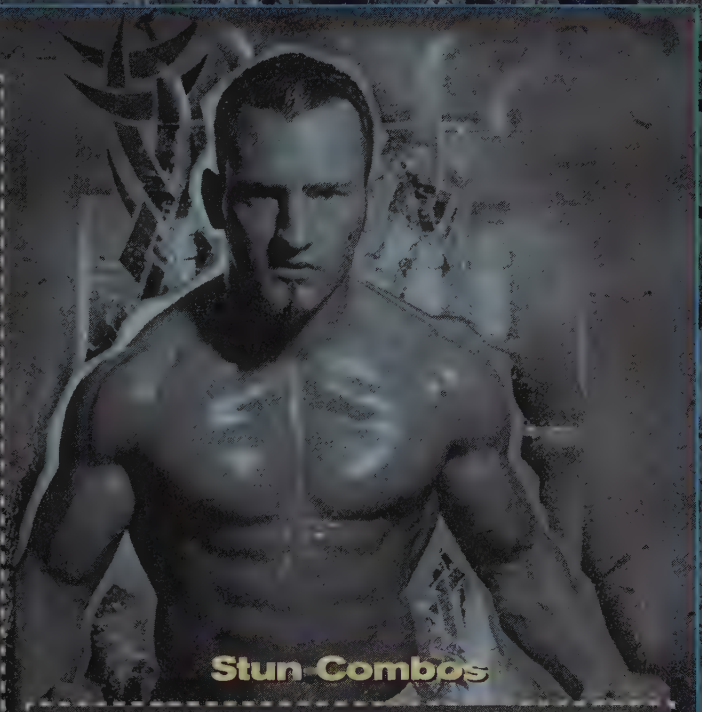
One of the most important things you'll need to learn while playing Backyard Wrestling is that each wrestler has three different stun meters, and each stun meter is filled using different methods of attack. The meters are located underneath each wrestler's health bar.

The yellow meter is the smallest and is filled using basic melee attacks like punches and kicks. As you punch and kick, your opponent's meter fills, and they become "punch drunk." This is the shortest stun in the game, but will still enable you to further damage your now-helpless opponent.

The orange stun meter is located in the middle of the three meters. This middle meter is filled using various slams and attack throws. Once you knock your opponent down and he is stunned, pick him up again for another slam to deliver additional cyber-pain.

The red meter is the largest and is filled by performing jumps and Irish whips. This meter takes the longest to fill but also stuns your opponent for the longest period of time.

The key is to watch which meter is closest to being filled, then use that type of attack to stun your opponent. When your opponent is stunned, he can't fight back, he can't reverse your move, and he is basically yours for the ass kicking. All damage you inflict during the stun is also tallied up at the screen's bottom. Keep racking up the attacks and try to get the highest score possible.



Stun Combos

One of the biggest bonuses to stunning opponents is that you can also link stun moves together to perform a longer stun, in turn, enabling you to knock your opponent silly with slams and suplexes. In fact, you can link all three stun meters together to completely take control of your match. Here's how to do it:

Step One: Try to fill each meter to a nearly full state, but in the process of pulverizing your opponent, don't completely fill any of the three meters. Once each meter is almost full, then fill the first meter with a final punch or two. This will cause your opponent to be "punch drunk."

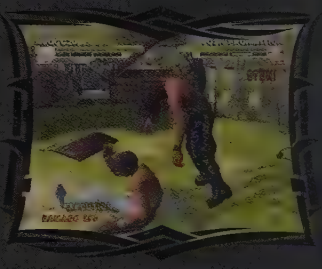
Step Two: Once your opponent is in the "punch drunk" state, hit him with a slam. As soon as you perform the move, the orange stun meter flashes, indicating that you've successfully stunned your opponent a second time.

Step Three: When your opponent is down, find a nearby table or car from which to jump off, then leap onto your prone opponent. Once you land on top of your opponent, your red meter will be filled, and you have successfully linked all three stun moves together.

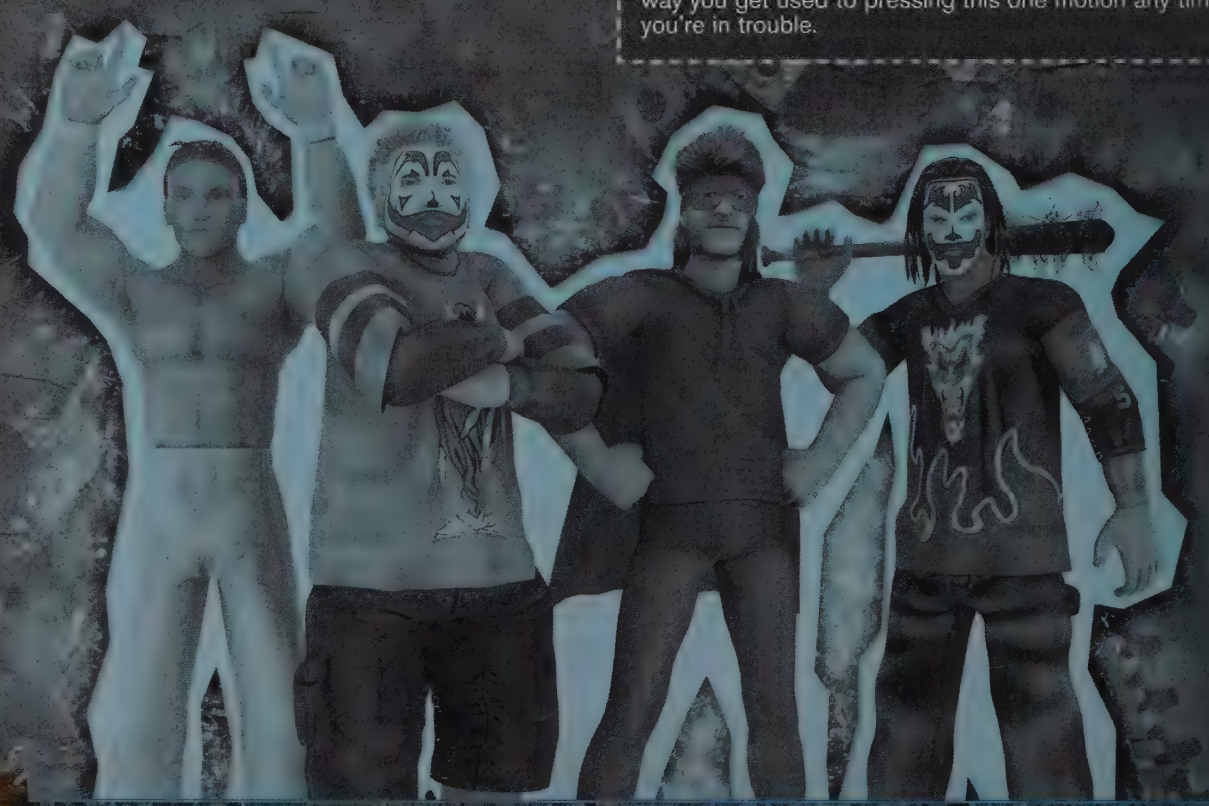
Now that your opponent is down for the longest possible stun, it's time to climb to the highest spot in the level and perform a daredevil trick from the rooftops. Hit this big stunt, and it's curtains for your opponent.

Reversals

The key to hitting reversals is timing. Every time you or your opponent is about to perform a move, the wrestler on the defense will flash. As soon as you see the flash, you must attempt the reverse. Press the buttons too soon or too late, however, and it's all over.



To do a reversal, simply button mash any time you're about to be beaten. Since every move has different timing for the reversal, instead of memorizing all of the rhythms, you can simply mash the same buttons repeatedly in hopes of hitting the reversal. You can reverse any move using the same button strikes you use for throws and slams. The simplest way to reverse is to always use the same slam move as your reversal, that way you get used to pressing this one motion any time you're in trouble.

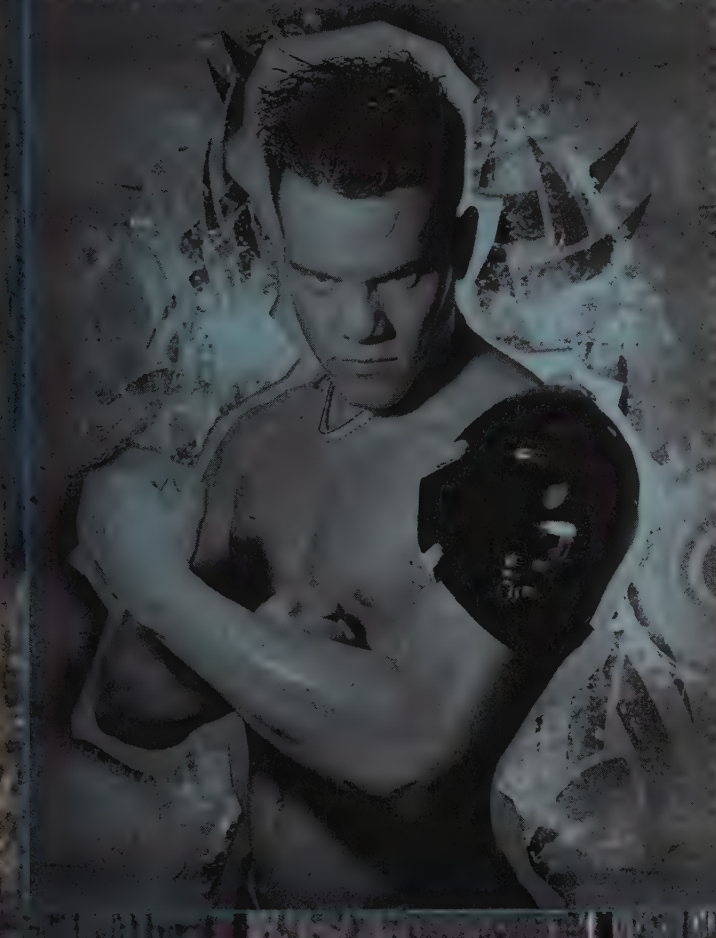


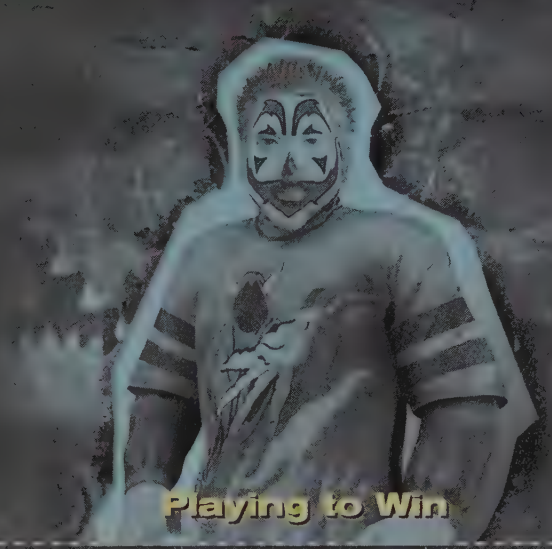
PRIMAGAMES.COM

Finishers

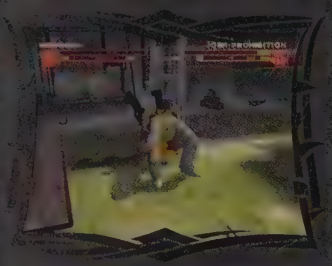
Every character in the game has a finishing move used to knock out opponents. The key is to not use this move too early. As you beat up your opponent, your health meter will begin to flash, which means your finishing move is now available to use. If you use the move right away, however, it probably won't completely knock your opponent unconscious, and he can get up and continue the match. Sure, the move does a lot of damage, but they're called finishers for a reason. Besides, there's nothing worse than fighting desperate opponents who feel they have nothing to lose by going for crazy moves because their health is already at the bare minimum.

The best thing to do is continue to punch, kick, and slam your opponents until their health meter is about a quarter full. This way, when you finally hit your finisher, it finishes them off.





Playing to Win



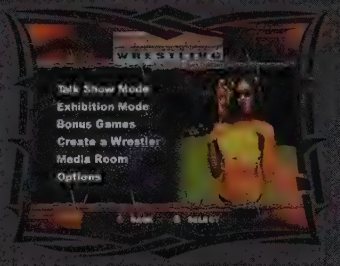
Remember, it's always nice to knock your opponent out, but don't forget about the pin as well. Sure, it's not as gratifying, but if your opponent's health is low in the red and he's flat on his back, go for the pin instead of picking him up. It might be the quickest way to a win.

Remember, Backyard Wrestling isn't just about beating your opponents; it's about how you beat them. You must learn each environment in which you're wrestling, from the weapons, to the non-playable characters who do damage, to the spots you can climb up and jump down from.

Check the intro to each level and watch what locations are shown on screen. This is a great clue that you can perform some crazy move in this area. The better you learn the seven locations, the better you'll be at the game because you can slam opponents into other characters who will then do the dirty work for you. You will know where that barbed-wire bat is. You'll know that you can light the mattress on fire. This knowledge is king in Backyard Wrestling; with a little experience, you'll be the champ of the backyard circuit in no time.

Game Modes

Backyard Wrestling features a variety of game modes to get your fight on. Here's a list of each mode, along with a brief rundown of what you should expect.



Talk Show Mode

It's time to take out the trash. Talk Show mode is centered around, what else, a talk show full of "Oh no you didn't!" moments and people who look like their father and brother are one and the same. After watching a short clip from "Today's Topic," you will face off against some of the meanest backyard bruisers in the business. Each segment has a list of opponents that you must defeat to continue. The final character you face in each segment is the boss. Defeat the boss to pass the level and save your progress.

You can't save your game in between bosses, so make every fight count—if you lose to the boss, you'll have to play the entire mission over. Also, if you fight and defeat a locked character in Talk Show mode, they unlock and become available to play in the other modes after you finish the level. Additionally, level locations you play through will also become unlocked for play in the various other game modes. Beat Talk Show mode entirely, and you will be rewarded with two additional bonus games.

Exhibition Mode

This is the basic backyard brawl between two players or a single player versus a computer. Defeat opponents through either pinfall or knockout.

Tag Mode

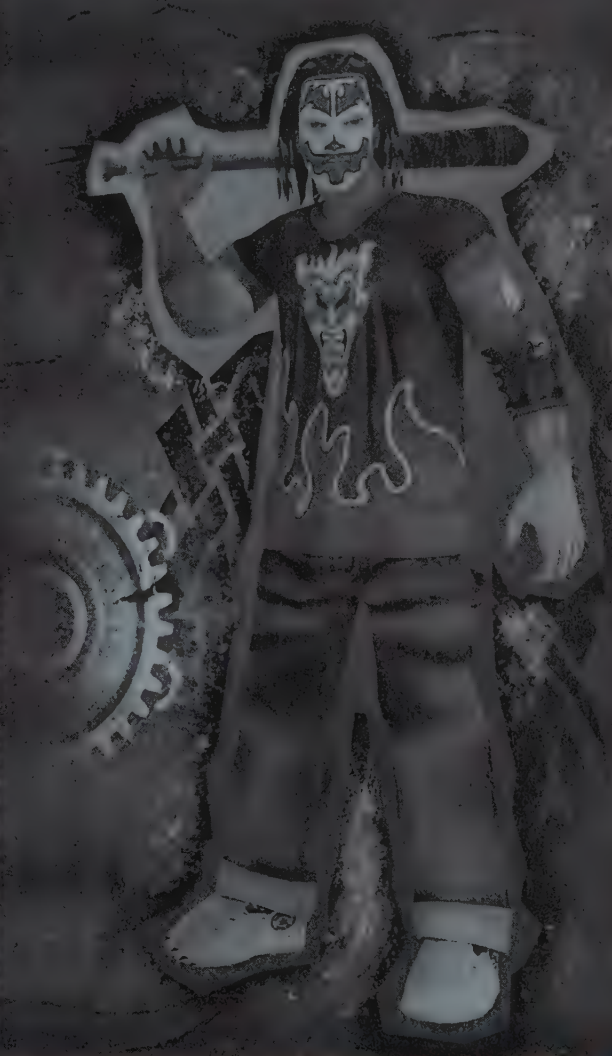
Not the game you'd normally think of when you think tag and wrestling. Remember, the name of the game is tag, not tag team, so don't go in thinking you're going to be the next British Bulldogs or anything like that. It's more like the game of tag you used to play on the playground than anything you've seen on pay per view. Basically, to tag your opponent and make them "It," you must perform a move that takes them off of their feet. The person who is It, then catches on fire until they can tag the other person back by knocking them to the ground, and in turn setting them on fire.

You can set the time limit for the time each wrestler will actually stay on fire to five seconds, ten seconds, or infinite. The problem with infinite, though, is that once someone gets lit on fire, the rest of the game simply turns into a race as the wrestlers chase each other around the level. Five seconds seems to work best and makes for the fiercest battles as you see who can light who on fire the most in a given round.

King of the Hill

There is no hill, nor is there a crown. What there is in this mode is a push-and-shove battle for position and health that leads to one wrestler still standing at the match's end. When the match starts, you'll see a certain quadrant of the location light up. The goal is to have your wrestler in that lit area while your opponent is in the unlit area. For every second you're in the lit area, you will gain health. For every second you're in the unlit area, you lose health. Simple rules, simple solution to win.

The key is to get on the lit area and lash whip your opponent to the other side of the level. By the time he makes it back to the lit area, more damage will be done than if you simply tried to fight him the entire time. Plus, this way you're gaining health while he's running to the opposite side of the level and quickly losing health. Like I said, a simple solution.



Bonus Games

Survival

Survival is the one bonus game that is unlocked from the moment you boot up the game, and it is a true test of any backyard brawler's skill. The goal is to defeat as many opponents as possible using only one health bar. After each match, your health is replenished a small amount, then another opponent enters the yard looking for a fight. As you progress through each fight, the random opponents that enter the yard become increasingly difficult to defeat. You'll need to break out all of the weapons and any tricks you have up your sleeve to score win after win, until you can finally claim the highest score in the game.

In fact, you don't even need to be number one to be immortalized on your memory card, as the top five scores are saved, including number of opponents, your player initials, and the name of the wrestler you used to whip all of that ass.

PRIMAGAMES.COM

Talk Show Mode

Backyards with Bite

These are the best ways to beat opponents in Talk Show Mode. Anyone can win a match with basic moves and a finisher, but to get the most out of Backyard Wrestling, you must utilize the vast array of weapons tossed around each level, as well as the levels themselves. When each level starts, you're shown quick glimpses of different spots around the locale, from rooftops to tables to stairs. Keep these spots in mind when the match starts, as these quick glimpses are really clues about where to find the hottest spots for action. Sure, you already knew the stripper was hot, but did you know she'll kick you or, better yet, your opponent in the chops if you get to close? Didn't think so.

After defeating a wrestler, the next wrestler in the lineup will challenge you. Your health will replenish after each fight, but only a little, so avoid taking damage at all costs as a severe beat down in your first match might not cost you that fight, but a fight down the road. Your health will finally get back to normal after defeating the level boss and advancing to the next location.

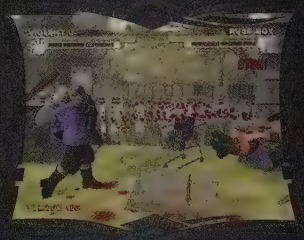
The first location also features some of the game's deadlier tricks. The first thing you notice is the crazy uncle barbecuing near the fence. Irish whip your opponent into the man in desperate need of both a shirt and a tan to make him angry. Once he's triggered, any time you or your opponent get near, he'll swipe at you with his hot fork.

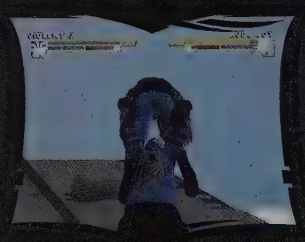
Near the barbecue you'll also notice a mattress with a red gas can at the end, sitting on the grass. Maybe this is your crazy uncle's bed, who knows, but it makes for a great fire. Smack your opponent until he is Punch Drunk, then use the break in fighting to pick up the gas can. This will cause you to automatically light the mattress on fire. Now pick up your stunned opponent and throw him into the fire.

On the opposite side of the yard, you'll find another crazy relative working on his car. Like the madman barbecuing, simply slam or Irish whip your opponent into the wannabe mechanic to force him into the action. Once triggered, any time you or your opponent get near, he'll torch your ass until you're nice and crispy.



You'll find plenty of useful weapons throughout the yard, from a car door to a baseball bat with barbed wire. You can even use the basketball to toss at your opponent's head, but try to stick with the big stuff. Why waste your time with a ball when you could be smashing your opponent's balls with a steel chair or a pool stick. Besides, if you're looking to throw something at your opponent, grab the pile of bricks near the boat.

Any time you see a ladder, take the clue that it's there for you to climb. Also, be aware of any and all tables set up around the yard. Not only can you suplex opponents through these tables, but you can set up stunned opponents on top of tables, then use the ladders to climb on top of the tree house or even the house roof to perform a super stunt.



If your opponent gets up before you can jump from the roof, don't worry. Wait for your opponent to climb up to the level you're already on, then grab him in a slam. You'll toss him back down to the main level, giving you a second chance to pounce on him from up high.

Any time you're fighting at a gas station, you know the action should be explosive. You just didn't know that the explosive part is taken quite literally in Backyard Wrestling. Slam your opponent or Irish whip him into the various gas pumps to cause explosions and fire. One pump goes high into the sky; another will actually cause a chain reaction of flames that lights piles of hay on fire.

PRIMAGAMES.COM

If your opponent is stunned, drag him over near the elephant and watch as the chick on top of the beast starts chucking things at your opponent's head. From this spot, you can knock over all of those big barrels on top of your already stunned opponent.

The ice machine and things like it aren't just there to make the level look pretty. You can actually pull ice out of the ice machine to bash your opponents with. Remember, these locations are here to hurt you, so take advantage of every inch.

Irish whip your opponent into the motorcycle parked near the bar, and the owner will come out looking for blood. Irish whip your opponent into this pissed-off patron and watch as he does all the ass kicking for you. Just don't get too close. This guy is an equal-opportunity ass kicker and doesn't care who gets in the way of his flying fists.

You can climb up the side of the big rig, up the ladder to the bar's roof, or even up the ladder that leads to the water tower. Like the backyard in the first location, try to set up your opponent on one of the many tables underneath these high spots, then jump off and crash through both your opponent and the wood.

Irish whip your opponent into the side of the ICP tour bus to open up the baggage compartment. You will then be able to swipe the ICP luggage and use it to pound your opponent in the head and gut.

The suit behind the window might just be the floor supervisor, but bust his window and he becomes one seriously pissed-off floor supervisor who is armed with a megaphone that he likes to smack into people's heads. Irish whip your opponent into the window, then continue to punch and kick your opponent over into that area to pick up extra hits from the supervisor.

The giant fan can be a deadly weapon. Use an Irish whip to send your opponent crashing through the protective area, then whip him again toward the fan. This time, without the protection, your opponent will eat the giant blades as you cool off in the breeze.

As you fight throughout the slaughterhouse, you'll notice a man standing near the cow in one of the corners. Try knocking your opponent near this strange little man and you'll find that this little man carries with him a big taser. Get hit with this, and your opponent will be feeling shocked, and possibly stunned, setting you up to perform another hard-hitting slam.

Over near the hazardous materials sign you'll find a garbage can full of cow parts and, well, hazardous materials. Don't let all of this goodness go to waste. Pick up the cow parts and throw them at your opponent from long range to smack him upside the head with a little cow heart or leg.

PRIMAGAMES.COM

Climb the ladder to fight on top of the scaffolding. This is the most dangerous place in the slaughterhouse, so make sure you're the one tossing your opponent back down to the main floor and not the other way around. It's a long drop back down to the cows, and it's a drop you don't want to suffer.

You will also be able to climb on top of the small ledge near the hanging piece of cow meat. This is a great place for a quick combo strike, turning a slam and a stun into a slam, a stun, and then a high-flying maneuver off of the ledge.

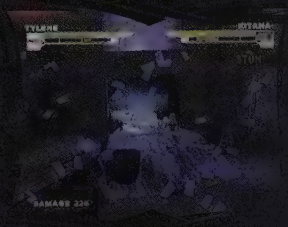
This is one of the most fun levels in terms of extras, as there are loads of weapons like chairs, tables, and candles everywhere, as well as lots of room to run around and experiment with the different areas in the club.

When you see a stripper on stage, most guys' initial reaction is to go up and try to touch her. This is a very bad mistake, however, because there's no sex in the champagne room, and this stripper likes to kick you in the teeth. Watch out as she swings around her pole. If you're too close, you're liable to take one in the chops.

Another danger point is the bar. No, they're not having half-priced Long Island Ice Teas; what I'm talking about is the bartender who would rather throw bottles at anyone who steps near the bar than actually pour someone a drink. Irish whip your opponent over toward the bar and stand back as he takes a bottle to the noggin.

What's a strip club without showers, and in Backyard Wrestling, these showers are even interactive. Irish whip your opponent into the shower, then walk in and turn it on. The water will scald your opponent, and you're left laughing at the clever way you just brutalized another adversary.

Speaking of clever ways to beat up opponents, Irish whip your opponent into the giant fish tank, not once, but twice, to crack the glass and spill all of the water and fish out onto the floor. Pick up a fish and slap the smell out of it as your opponent falls to the ground, thanks to a guppy to the head.



Near the bar is scaffolding that goes up the wall. Climb up to reach the VIP area above the club. If your opponent follows you, simply grab him and toss him back down, then jump off the ledge to crash down onto him for a serious case of hurt.

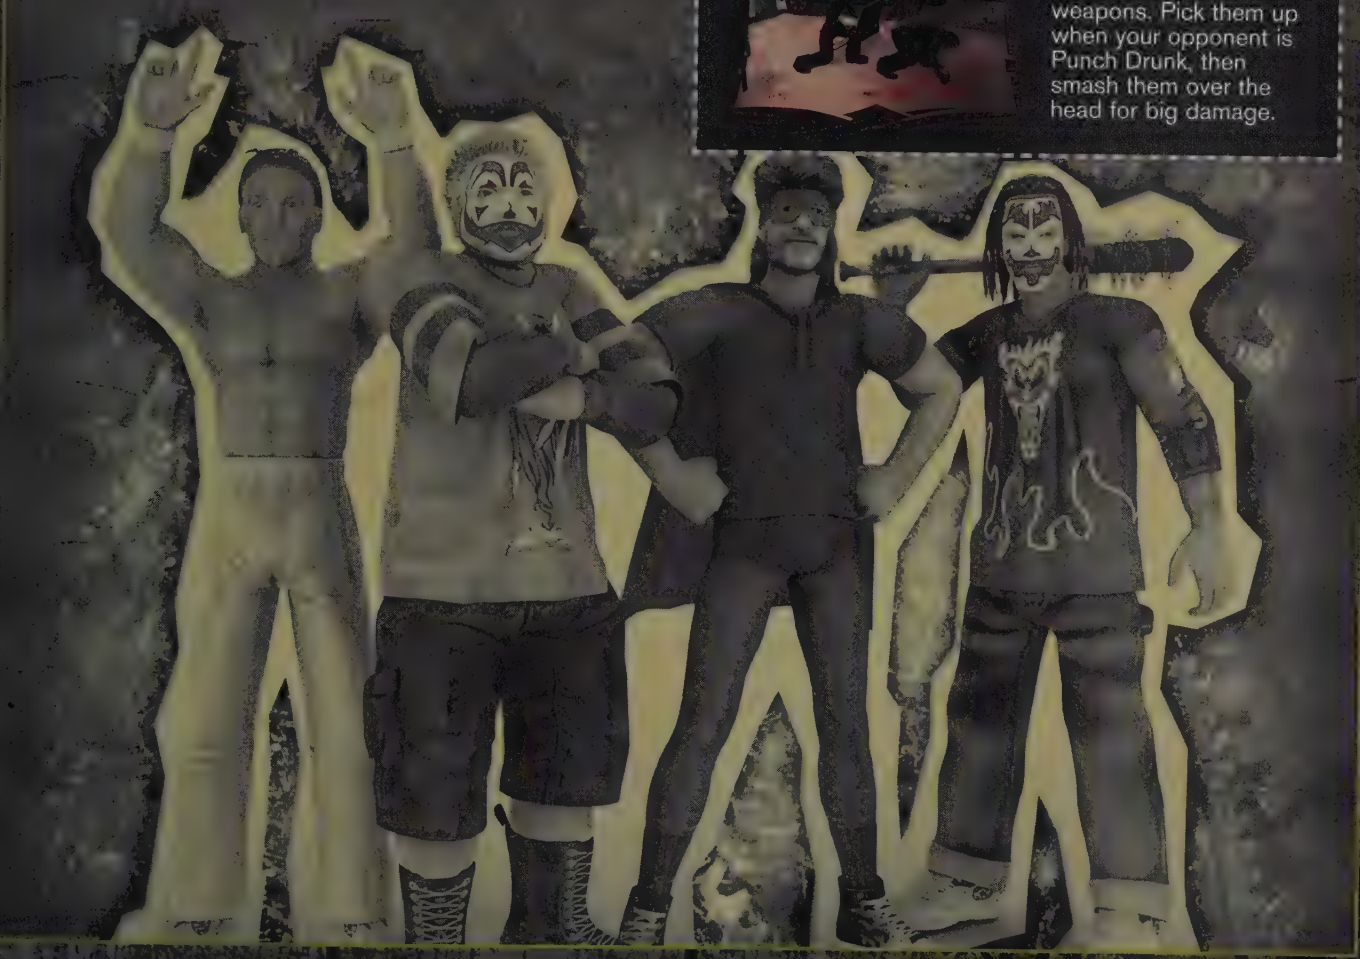
Some Santas give gifts, others, like this drunk Saint Nick at the mall, would rather hand out beat downs. Irish whip your opponent into the liquored-up Mr. Claus' shopping cart to bring out the nasty side in this jolly old fellow. I'd hate to be Rudolph at a time like this.

Some Christmas gifts, like the TV and golf clubs in the back of the green car, are better to give than receive. Loot the car for all of the goods, but instead of keeping them for yourself, use them to smash over your opponent's head.

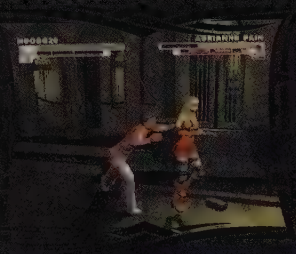
You can climb up the side of the elevator or even on top of the glass bus stop to deliver a high-flying maneuver. The higher you are, the more velocity you come down with, so make sure your opponent is within striking distance before attempting a big stunt like this.

The stop sign near the station wagon and the bike in the bike rack make for awesome weapons. Pick them up when your opponent is Punch Drunk, then smash them over the head for big damage.



Place your opponent on top of the wood crate, then jump off of the green dumpster to smash through both your opponent and the wood he was on top of.

The naked mannequin makes for an interesting and useful weapon. It's back behind the green dumpster. Pick it up and use it to finish off your opponent.



Irish whip your opponent into the bushes near the house, and a woman will start chucking objects down at him from the balcony. Light her backyard on fire and she doesn't care. Step on some flowers, however, and it's time to fight.

There's a green bucket full of light tubes that you can use as weapons near the flowerpot full of red roses. Run over to the bucket and take a few swings at your opponent. With any luck, you'll knock him right into the bushes previously mentioned, and your opponent will be hit with a double whammy, from both you and the woman on the balcony.

Good help is hard to find, but the butler by the stairs sure knows how to protect his boss's property. Don't even think of running up the stairs unless you feel like being clobbered upside the head by a man who likes to repeat the phrase "You rang?"

Irish whip your opponent toward the stage area. If he hits one of the wood Backyard Wrestling signs, he will hurt. If he hits one of the giant speakers, he will hurt even more due to the giant electrical shock he'll receive.

The best thing about a television studio is all of the electrical equipment. The most significant is the giant TV screen with the show title "Today's Topic" on it. Irish whip your opponent into the screen to see some real shock TV.

If you're looking to light the bar on fire, Irish whip your opponent into it twice. The first hit will damage it a little. The second will ignite the area behind it into a huge fire.

If fire isn't your thing, you can always cause a flood. Simply Irish whip your opponent into the side of the hot tub and watch as the side springs a leak and the bubbling water leaks all over your fallen opponent's face.

Since no TV show is complete without barbed-wire baseball bats sitting around, take advantage of the situation and the many weapons around the stage to strike Mad Man Pondo with some of his favorite measures of pain.

The show's big, bald, badass bodyguard stands near the right side of the level, off in the shadows. Walk toward him, though, and you'll know why he got the job. His fists do the damage of most bats.

If you're running low on health, you can hit your opponent from a distance by pushing the TV cameras at him. This is one way to try and get a stun; then follow up with a slam when you know he can't hurt you.

Some of the studio audience aren't too pleased by "Today's Topic" and take it out on anyone who runs near the cheap seats. This one angered fan actually rips the chairs from the ground and tosses them toward you if you stand near.

If you're looking to reach new heights, climb up the silver extension that elevates you near the lights. This is a perfect spot to deliver your final blow, especially if your opponent is already prone on the desk underneath.

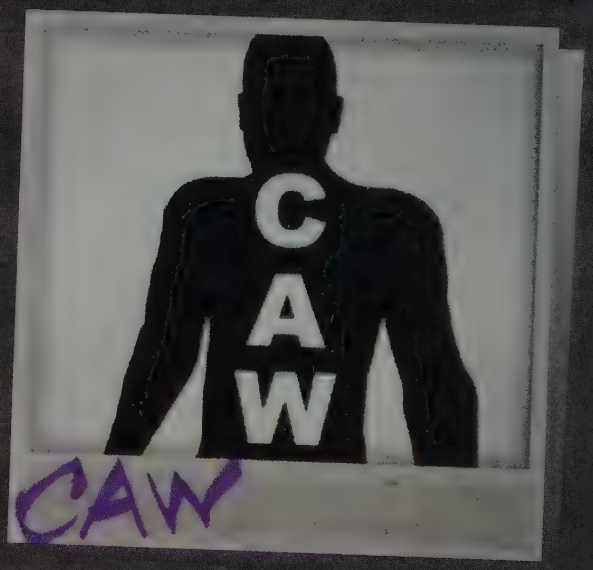
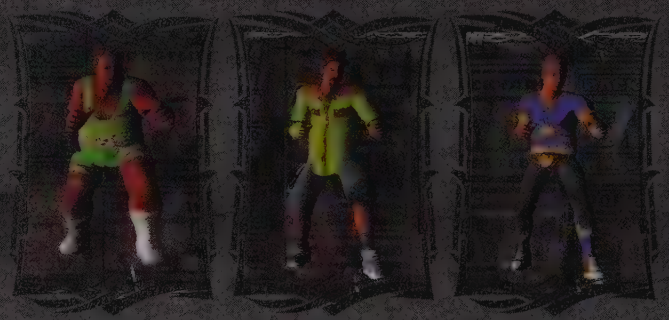
Create-A-Wrestler (CAW)

Say you like the game but not the wrestlers themselves. That's okay, the game allows you to create up to six custom wrestlers to send into action. Here's an example of the types of wrestlers you can create.



You have 15 choices of body type. Depending on what you want your wrestler to look like, you can select different skin tones and one of 12 custom outfits specific to their body type.



Once you have looks that kill, it's time to pick some moves to match. Not only are you able to select your fighter's basic fighting style, you can also set up your character's throws and slams. Here's the complete list of your choices.

In 1999, Matt Capiccioni won gold medals in both the Rings and Vault at the AAU National Junior Olympics. This capped off a successful 10-year gymnastics career, and it became time to lay the foundation for what the world would later know as MDogg20. Out of sheer boredom and an ever-burning athletic drive, Matt took to the backyard brawling with his friends, denting ladders, and forever revolutionizing the pastime of backyard wrestling. With his gymnastic background and apparent disregard for heights and the law of gravity, Matt became MDogg20 and the world took note. After his feats received national exposure with the release of the Best of Backyard Wrestling video series in which he's prominently featured, MDogg20 decided to take professional wrestling from a hobby to a career.

Known as Major Guns back in the WCW, Tylene Buck rose from bikini contest babe to top fitness model to the world of professional wrestling, and in a short time became one of the most popular women in the sport. Buck now hopes to take on Hollywood, as she pursues her dream of becoming an actress. In the meantime, though, Tylene tantalizes the backyard brawlers and utilizes her "major guns" to distract opponents as she knocks them upside the head, then crawls on top for the 1-2-3.

Josh "Prohibition" Piscura was a stand-out high school baseball star in Brecksville, Ohio when a shoulder injury cut short his career. He, like many other backyard stars, was a wrestling fan at a young age, often skipping church to sneak over to a friend's house to watch the exploits of Hulk Hogan, Ultimate Warrior, and Mr. Perfect. Once his baseball dreams were dashed, he began to focus on his original childhood dream . . . prowrestling. A late-night glimpse at the revolutionary ECW (Extreme Championship Wrestling) greatly influenced his style, and shortly after, Josh began putting on extreme wrestling matches in his backyard with his childhood friend Matt "MDogg20" Capiccioni.

These insane matches began drawing the attention of many wrestling fans in Brecksville, and thus the Brecksville Wrestling Federation was born. Josh and his crew videotaped all of their exploits, never realizing that they would draw national attention. Josh Prohibition became immortalized in the Best of the Backyard Wrestling video series, volumes 1 and 2, and was drafted as a spokesperson for the video series.

Member of the popular rapping clowns, the ICP, Violent J grew up a huge wrestling fan, spending hours upon hours watching his favorite hardcore superstars, the Sheik and Bo Bo Brazil, beat fools bloody on a nightly basis. Teaming with fellow clown rapper Shaggy 2 Dope, J decided to take on the world of wrestling, fighting for years on the independent scene, before finally catching on with ECW. From there the Insane Clown Posse rose to prominence in the then WWF, then moved on and joined WCW at the height of the Monday night wrestling wars. Soon after, the ICP joined the hardcore wrestling alliance known as JCW, where they still wrestle today.

Young Man Pondo was bitten by the wrestling bug at the age of five in rural Illinois. He regularly attended all wrestling shows within a six-hour driving radius with a family friend, traveling to St. Louis, Indiana, and Chicago to witness his favorite wrestlers in action—legendary names like Bruiser Brody, Abdullah the Butcher, The Sheepherders, and the infamous Jos Leduc. Teen-aged Pondo was "lucky" enough to spot Canadian Wrestling Hall of Famer Jos Leduc after a wrestling show in Evansville, Indiana, and ran across the street to shake the man's hand and profess his admiration for him. In the old days of wrestling, bad guys "lived their gimmicks" and Jos was no different. Jos Leduc pinned Pondo down on the ground, bounced his head off the concrete, and punched him in the face repeatedly, bloodying his nose and blackening his eyes. Fortunately, Pondo's grandmother(!) was able to convince the six-foot-plus, 300-pound monster to stop the beating. The next day at school, Pondo got his first taste of fame, when he showed up at school with black eyes, and the whole school was buzzing with the story of the kid who "went toe to toe with Jos Leduc."

Among many things, Mad Man Pondo is an innovator, coming up with his own specialty match: "The 4 Corners of Pain," which features a pit full of thumbtacks in one corner, a pit full of barbed wire in the second corner, a pit full of mousetraps in the third corner, and a pit full of broken glass in the fourth corner. He began working regularly around the country, always carrying a stop sign, and rapidly gaining a name for himself and his over-the-top style and specialty matches, as well as his public access TV show, "Skull Talk."

In the world of wrestling, only one man can make the rules. Only one man can call the shots. That man in backyard wrestling is the Commissioner. Sporting a neck tie and a look of authority, the Commissioner tries to set the yard in order, but trying to direct a bunch of clowns and strippers is a lot more difficult than even he imagined. A legend of the Backyard Wrestling DVDs, you must listen to the Commissioner's orders. You don't want him to rule against you.

One of the most famous backyard babes of all time, most people don't realize Kitana Baker had a career long before wrestling in a fountain of water for Miller Lite. Back in the day, Kitana was one of the original ladies featured in Backyard Wrestling. She can be seen in videos rubbing whipped cream all over herself, that is, when she's not rubbing in the coconut oil.

jcw's evil dead

Even death can't stop the winning streak of Evil Dead, as he maneuvers his limp body through match after match. As people watch him take chair shots to the head and get thrown off the roofs of bars and restaurants, you start to wonder why opponents bother trying to hurt someone who is already supposedly dead. Speculation has it that JCW's Evil Dead is really Violent J's brother in disguise, but until the mask comes off, nobody really knows for sure.

masked horn dog

The life of the Masked Horn Dog is one shrouded in mystery, as little information has ever leaked out about the man, or why he's wearing a mask for that matter. Rumors have it that he was once kidnapped and brought to a secret government testing facility. While there, he was injected with early samples of Viagra that have now left him with a never-ending erection. That's a good thing if you're the Masked Horn Dog, but a very bad thing if you're his opponent as he tries to pin you. No, it's not a bat in his hand, the Horn Dog is just happy to see you.

The man who never met a beverage he didn't like, El Drunko's favorite location is the Mansion. No, he's not too fond of the butler or the hot tub, but he's a big fan of the open bar. El Drunko wears a mask so he can act like the biggest ass possible while intoxicated, even stripping down to his skivvies on countless occasions with hopes that no one will be able to figure out his true identity. Too bad his mom still writes his name in his underwear.

Just a few years into his life, Rudy Hill's father took him to his first wrestling show at the world famous Cobo Arena in Detroit. The top heel in the territory was the legendary Sheik who made an impression on his opponents, stabbing them with anything he could get his hands on–which quite often included a sharpened pencil–and burning them with fireballs. While scars and burns may fade, the impression made on the future "King of Hardcore" was indelible. Over the years, he became a fixture at the arena, waiting after the matches to meet his wrestlers, and eventually showing up hours before the matches, all the while professing to everyone who would listen that he would be a professional wrestler. As a teenager, he started carrying the wrestlers' bags into the locker room before the matches, and helping to set up the ring, even after the shows moved from the Cobo Arena to the legendary Joe Louis Arena.

Rude Boy has slowly moved up the wrestling ranks and is now the head booker and writer for JCW, as well as one of its top stars, "The King of Hardcore," who feuds with one of the last great hardcore legends Abdullah The Butcher.
